1. DISCOVER DENVER OVERVIEW

Project Purpose

Discover Denver is a multi-year project intended to develop a comprehensive inventory of Denver's historic and architecturally significant resources. Led by Historic Denver, Inc. in collaboration with the City and County of Denver, this project utilizes advanced technology to accelerate the pace of historic resource survey and improve the consistency of data collection. Project methodology is based on the Multiple Property Documentation Approach and the Historic Context Statement framework developed by the National Park Service.

Denver covers a land area of 154 square miles and contains approximately 160,000 primary buildings. As of the beginning of the survey covered by this report, fewer than 11% of these buildings had been surveyed for historical and architectural significance. In 2018, the City and County of Denver received and approved more than 600 demolition permits. Consequently, Denver is at risk of losing many properties that tell the story of the city's evolution and the people, events, ethnic and cultural heritages, and architectural styles that make Denver a special and interesting place to live.

Recent studies have shown that economic development occurs in historic districts at seven times the rate of other areas. According to The Economic Power of Heritage and Place (The Colorado Historical Foundation, 2011) and Preservation for a Changing Colorado (Colorado Preservation, Inc., 2017), investment in historic resources creates jobs, attracts businesses, and generates income from consumer visitation and spending. The purpose of Discover Denver is to identify those special places in our community where rehabilitation and investment will preserve our city's unique identity and promote quality of life for generations to come.

Project History

Discover Denver is a multi-phase project. The project's initial methodology was developed and evaluated in two preparatory phases, the Investigative Phase and the Pilot Phase. Subsequent phases of the project have used the same base methodology, though the methodology has been refined with each new phase.

Investigative Phase - The initial phase of Discover Denver (2010-2011) focused on developing a methodology and funding plan for the project. During this phase, staff from Historic Denver, Inc., the City and County of Denver, and the Colorado Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation worked with consultants Winter & Company and an advisory committee comprised of community stakeholders. The report Denver Historic Survey: Citywide Survey Strategy was the result of these efforts. Recommendations in the report included the use of survey software and methodologies developed by the City of Los Angeles for use in its own citywide survey, SurveyLA.

Pilot Phase – The goal of the Pilot Phase (2012-2015) was to test out recommendations made in the Investigative Phase. To test the proposed methodology, three distinct pilot survey efforts were undertaken. Pilot 1 focused on a post-World War II developer-planned residential subdivision, Pilot 2 looked at 1920s small homes in two geographically distinct areas, and Pilot 3 focused on streetcar commercial districts embedded in two residential neighborhoods. An agreement with the City of Los Angeles allowed Discover Denver to use survey software developed for its own citywide survey, SurveyLA. The software was used in Pilot 1 and Pilot 2, but by Pilot 3 was determined not to be a good long-term fit for Discover Denver due to hardware costs and the level of technical support required for its use. New survey software was developed that ran on inexpensive handheld tablets. This software was used in subsequent phases of Discover Denver, Phase One and Phase Two. Field survey efforts for the Pilot Phase ended in Fall 2014, and reporting on the Pilot Phase was completed in Spring 2015.

Phase One - The first non-pilot survey phase of Discover Denver, Phase One, began in Spring 2015 and documented buildings in three Denver neighborhoods (Jefferson Park, Globeville, and Elyria-Swansea). Phase One efforts were completed in 2017.

Phase Two - Survey efforts in Phase Two focused on three survey areas (Virginia Village, City Park West, and Capitol Hill-West Cheesman), as well as sections of two of Denver's major commercial corridors (East 17th Avenue and South Broadway). Phase Two used largely the same methodology employed in Phase One of Discover Denver. Phase Two efforts were completed in 2019.

Phase Three – Survey efforts in Phase Three, the most recent phase of Discover Denver, focused on four statistical neighborhoods (Congress Park, West Colfax, Regis, and Cole), a combined survey area comprised of the western section of the Capitol Hill neighborhood and the eastern portion of the Cheesman Park neighborhood, and sections of extant streetcar commercial districts located throughout the city.

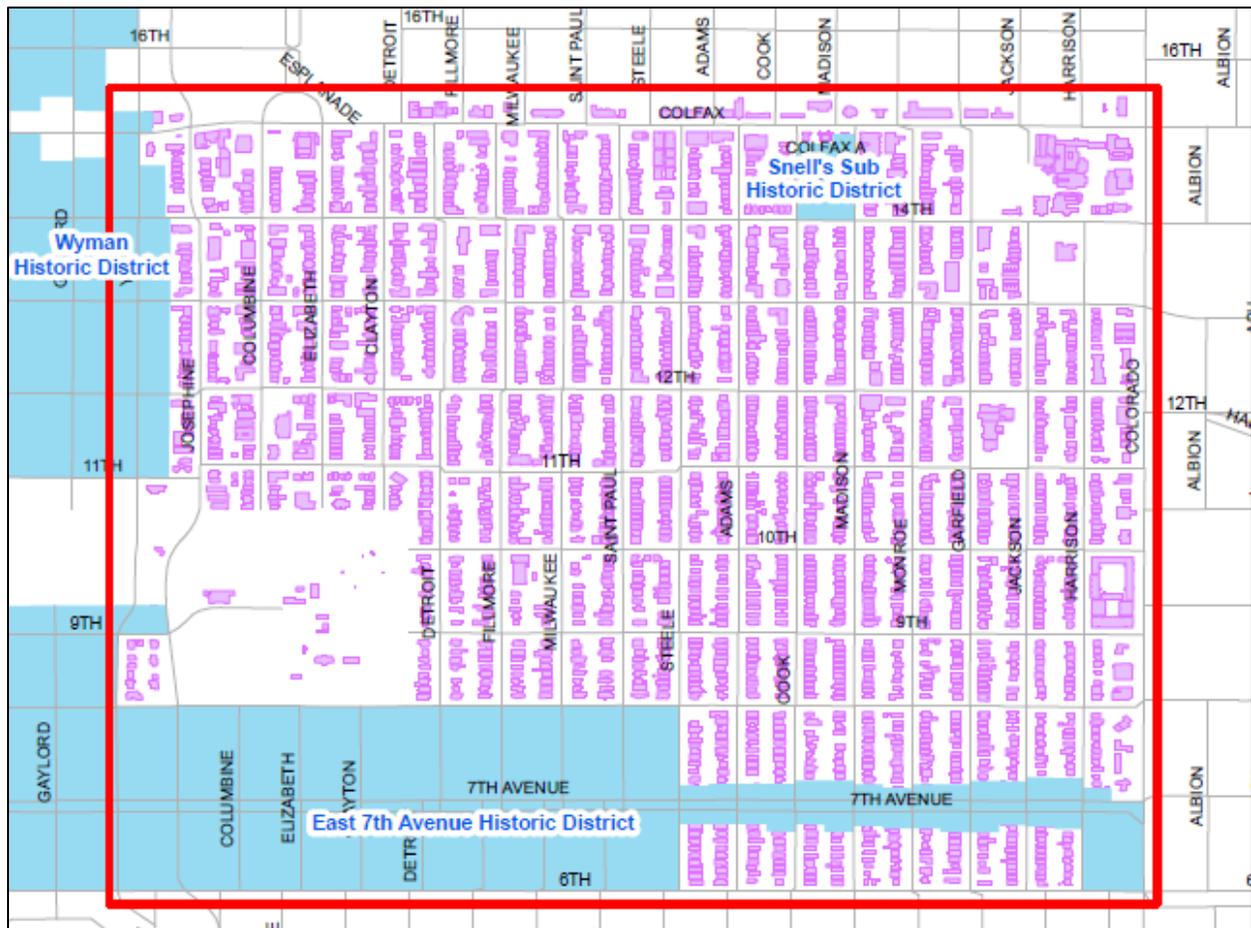

This report covers efforts in the Congress Park survey area, and other Phase Three survey areas are covered in their own reports.

2. INTRODUCTION: CONGRESS PARK SURVEY

Survey efforts in the Congress Park survey area began in September of 2018. All work was performed according to the general methods previously established by Historic Denver, Inc., with any changes or variations described in the Research Design and Methods section of this report. Survey of Congress Park took place from September 20, 2018, to July 2, 2019. Data for a total of 2,409 parcels was uploaded to the Discover Denver database. As with prior Discover Denver surveys, the bulk of the properties were surveyed by trained volunteers and Discover Denver staff. Properties and districts landmarked by the City and County of Denver were excluded from the survey. Additionally, churches and school buildings were not documented and will be covered in future thematic surveys.

3. PROJECT AREA

The Congress Park survey area consisted primarily of buildings within the Congress Park statistical neighborhood, bounded by East Colfax Avenue (north), York Street (west), E. 6th Avenue (south), and Colorado Boulevard (east). Because of their proximity and the history they share with buildings on the south side of the street, buildings on the north side of East Colfax Avenue as it borders the neighborhood were also included in the survey. The boundaries for the survey area are shown on the map below.

The blocks of the Congress Park survey area are lined with single-unit homes, though a fair number of multi-unit buildings are found in the neighborhood. Most north-south running streets are narrow, with the exception of Josephine Street which serves as a one-way arterial near the western border of the neighborhood. East-west streets are wider, with East 14th, East 13th, and East 8th avenues serving as one-way arterials. The sidewalks of the Congress Park survey area are characteristic of sidewalks constructed in Denver in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Broad tree lawns separate the sidewalks from the street curbs. Small commercial hubs with neat one-story commercial buildings are found along East 12th Avenue, a former streetcar route, at Elizabeth and Madison streets.

The historic look and feel of the survey area is best appreciated on the interior residential streets. It is there that it is possible to immerse oneself in the streetscapes of early Denver. Buildings from the Victorian, early Modern, and mid-twentieth century line the streets as visual reminders of Denver's multi-layered past. Towering deciduous trees such as Maple, Ash, and Linden, some of which were planted when the neighborhood was young, now shade the streets and sidewalks.

The northern and eastern edges of the Congress Park neighborhood are decidedly commercial. East Colfax Avenue, also known as U.S. 40, is lined with commercial buildings housing every imaginable business and ranging in height from one to five stories. Several grand homes, holdovers from its residential past and modified for commercial use, are still found along the street. Buildings along Colorado Boulevard contain a greater mix of uses, with substantial apartment blocks found next to commercial buildings and a few single-unit homes. Most commercial and multi-unit along Colorado Boulevard was built to serve the doctors, nurses, and students that worked at the nearby National Jewish and University of Colorado medical campuses.

4. RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODS

Survey Objectives and Scope of Work

The primary objective of this survey was to identify buildings within the Congress Park survey area having architectural, historical, or cultural significance.

A hybrid reconnaissance-intensive approach to the survey was taken. In this approach, buildings were surveyed at one of four levels: Foundation, Descriptive, Evaluation, and Enhanced. Increasing levels of detail were collected based on a building's age, historic physical integrity, and potential for architectural, historical, or cultural significance.

- Foundation Level

At the Foundation level, electronic data regarding physical location, address, year of construction, and use was collected from the City and County of Denver. All properties were surveyed at the Foundation level.

- Descriptive Level:

At the Descriptive level, all buildings thirty years of age or older, regardless of historic physical integrity, were field surveyed. One to three photographs were taken of each building, and limited information, such as architectural style, building type, and level of modification, was collected. Buildings less than thirty years of age were logged and photographed, but no additional data was collected.

- Evaluation Level:

At the Evaluation level, detailed information regarding architectural style, building type, architectural features, and setting were collected on buildings greater than thirty years of age that retained their historic physical integrity. Field evaluations were made for each of these buildings based on their potential for individual architectural significance and on whether they were located in a cluster with other buildings having significance. Discover Denver survey forms were generated for each of these resources and provided to the State Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation.

- Enhanced Level:

Historical research was performed on selected buildings having potential architectural, historical, or cultural significance, or that were good representations of the greater building stock of the Congress Park survey area. For each building researched, a Discover Denver Enhanced Survey Form, based on History Colorado's Architectural Inventory Form (1403), was completed. Each property was evaluated in terms of individual significance and significance as a part of a cluster of buildings having architectural, cultural, or historical significance at the national, state, and local levels.

Survey Exclusions

Schools and churches were excluded from this survey and will be covered in future citywide thematic surveys. Buildings individually designated as historic landmarks by the City and County of Denver or those within Denver Historic Landmark Districts were also excluded from the survey.

Project Participants

Discover Denver is a partnership between Historic Denver, Inc. and the City and County of Denver’s Community Planning and Development Department. Trained community volunteers and interns played a significant role in the project, performing most of the field survey and historical research under the supervision of project staff.

File Search and Previous Survey Work

Identification of resources previously surveyed was performed in Fall 2018. A number of properties have been determined officially eligible for listing in the National or State registers by the Colorado Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation. Some of these resources have subsequently been designated at the national, state, or local level. The following resources have been determined eligible but remain undesignated:

Year of Determination	Address	Eligibility
1989	1478 Elizabeth Street	National Register
1991	1275 Monroe Street	National Register
1993	1240 Columbine Street	National Register
2007	2301 E. Colfax Avenue	National Register
2007	3000-3002 E. Colfax Avenue	National Register
2007	3220-3242 E. Colfax Avenue	National Register
2016	1374 Saint Paul Street	National Register
2017	3800 E. Colfax Avenue (National Jewish Hospital)	National Register

Currently Designated Resources

The Congress Park neighborhood contains individual properties and districts that are designated as historic landmarks in the City and County of Denver. It also contains individual properties that have been placed in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP) and the State Register of Historic Places (SRHP).

Twelve individually designated buildings were identified within the Congress Park survey area:

Address	Site No.	Historic Name	Local	NRHP	SRHP
1080 Clayton Street	5DV.5639	Fire Station #15	X
2400-2418 E. Colfax Avenue	5DV.4688	Austin Building	X	X
3315-3317 E. Colfax Avenue	5DV.4519	Bluebird Theater	X	X
3503 E. Colfax Avenue	5DV.10743	Bastien's Restaurant		X
1140 Columbine Street	5DV.720	Stevens Elementary School	X
1477 Columbine Street	5DV.12438	Fifth Church of Christ, Scientist	X
1305 Elizabeth Street	5DV.9198	Lorenzo Benson House	X
1475 Elizabeth Street	5DV.4045	Bonfils Memorial Theater/Lowenstein Theater	X	X
940 Fillmore Street	5DV.10941	Saint Philomena Catholic School		X	X
1100 Fillmore Street	5DV.8077	Capitol Heights Presbyterian Church			X
940 Josephine Street	5DV.5291	Russel and Elinor Gates Mansion	X	X
1400 Josephine Street	No Site ID	Bosworth House	X

The following designated districts are located or partially located in the Congress Park survey area:

Name	Site ID	Local	NRHP	SHRP
East 7 th Avenue Historic District	5DV.5186	X
Frank S. Snell Subdivision	5DV.5181	X
Wyman Historic District	5DV.5187	X
Morgan's Subdivision Historic District	5DV.5180	X

Public Outreach

Public outreach occurred prior to beginning fieldwork. Discover Denver staff met with the city council representative for the Congress Park neighborhood to discuss the survey project and to answer any questions. Each registered neighborhood organization (RNO) in the survey area was contacted about upcoming fieldwork. Multiple presentations were given to the Congress Park Neighbors RNO prior to and during fieldwork.

Survey Software and Database

Field survey data was collected on handheld tablets, in proprietary survey software designed for Discover Denver. Survey data collected in the field was stored in a SQL Server database and used for later reporting. Before survey work began in the Congress Park survey area, the database was pre-populated with parcel data acquired from the City and County of Denver. Pre-populated data included the parcel ID number (PIN), parcel address, and the assessor's year of construction for the primary building on each parcel.

After survey data had been collected on all properties in the Congress Park survey area, data from the SQL Server database was exported. This survey data was then imported into an Access database to facilitate the generation of survey forms. For properties documented at the Enhanced Level, historical background and property evaluation information was joined to the survey data and a Discover Denver Enhanced Survey Form was generated. For all other properties surveyed at the Descriptive or Evaluation level, a Discover Denver Survey Data Form was generated.

Survey Fieldwork

Survey of the Congress Park survey area took place on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays from September 20, 2018 to July 2, 2019. Data for a total of 2,410 parcels was uploaded to the Discover Denver database. The bulk of the properties were surveyed by trained volunteers overseen by Discover Denver staff. Properties and districts that are currently landmarked by the City and County of Denver were excluded from the survey as were school and church buildings, which will be included in future thematic surveys. Unbuilt parcels were included in the database but noted as having been unbuilt at the time of survey, with current use (e.g., "Surface Parking") noted in the entry.

Volunteers were given field guides that offered sample images of building styles and types expected to be encountered in the field. For each tablet, the volunteer or volunteer team using that tablet was provided with a map upon which they initialed the properties they surveyed. Areas for daily survey were identified and mapped in ArcMap, and parcel information was transferred to the tablets using the parcel identification number (PIN). Maps were generated as pdfs and printed for use in the field, with each parcel to be surveyed designated by color, and building outlines provided in order to facilitate accurate data collection in the "building plan" field (see example below). In some cases, maps communicated other information about the buildings to the surveyors, such as whether the building's current use was non-residential. The map was also marked if a property was under thirty years of age. Tablets were made identifiable by individualizing them with home screen/wallpaper photos to facilitate the post-survey QA/QC process.

A minimum of three photographs of each building surveyed was taken by the team leader. These generally consisted of one facade photograph and two oblique photographs. In many instances, such as corner parcels, four or more photographs were taken in order to maximize information collected photographically. Photographs were relabeled according to the established Discover Denver photograph label convention (e.g., "MILWAUKEE_ST_N_1363.001").

Following field survey, Discover Denver staff quality checked tablet entries against photographs to ensure accuracy and legibility of data. For volunteers who were new to the project or who demonstrated a lower aptitude relative to their teammates, 100% of entries were checked. Additionally, because the Congress Park survey area included a wide range of styles and types, the "Building Type" and "Architectural Style" fields were checked for most entries. Entries were also checked against survey maps to ensure that the correct property was recorded under that database entry and, if errors were discovered, they were corrected prior to uploading the data. Once data was uploaded, the data for that day was rechecked to ensure the data had fully synced to the database.

Historical Research

Historical research was performed on a select number of properties in the Congress Park survey area. Properties were chosen for historical research based on their potential architectural, cultural, or historical significance, or on the ability of the resource to convey the unique history and architecture of the neighborhood. In several cases, properties were chosen based on anecdotal information provided to Discover Denver by residents of the neighborhood.

Historical research included the use of Denver assessor records to determine a chain of ownership and city directories to determine residents or businesses associated with a given property. Resources available in the Denver Public Library's Western History and Genealogy collections were used extensively. These resources included building permits, master property records, historical maps, census records, obituary indexes, and the full series of the Rocky Mountain News and the Denver Post newspapers.

Historical research was used to complete Discover Denver Enhanced survey forms and to evaluate researched properties for national, state, and local significance.

5. HISTORICAL OVERVIEW

We acknowledge with respect that the lands now occupied by the City and County of Denver are the traditional and ancestral homelands of the Arapaho, Cheyenne, and Ute Nations. These lands were also an important site of trade for numerous other Native tribes. We recognize the Indigenous peoples as original stewards of this land and their descendants that still reside here.

For much of its history, the Congress Park neighborhood was part of a larger area known locally as Capitol Heights. The neighborhood didn't receive its current name until the 1970s when the Denver Planning Office divided the city into statistical planning units, naming most of them for features within their boundaries. The Congress Park neighborhood was named for the Denver city park of the same name created in 1939. References to Congress Park in this historical overview will refer to the Congress Park neighborhood unless otherwise specified.

From Cemetery to City Park

While most of today's Congress Park neighborhood is lined with well-kept homes, a large swath of open space in the southwest quadrant of the neighborhood contains municipal water reservoirs and the source of the neighborhood's name, the city park known as Congress Park. This area of the neighborhood dates to Denver's earliest days and has been largely undeveloped since the beginning.

In the winter of 1858-59 one of Denver's founders, William Larimer, staked off an area at this site for the fledgling city's first cemetery.¹ The cemetery would eventually be divided into sections for Roman Catholic burials (Mount Calvary), Jewish burials (Hebrew Burying and Prayer Ground), an area for burials of members of the Masonic and Improved Order of Odd Fellows groups, and an area known as Mount Prospect, later renamed City Cemetery. Collectively, the cemeteries made up what was known as "Cemetery Hill."² Today, Congress Park, Cheesman Park, the Denver Botanic Gardens, and Denver Water's reservoirs and communications center make up the former graveyard.

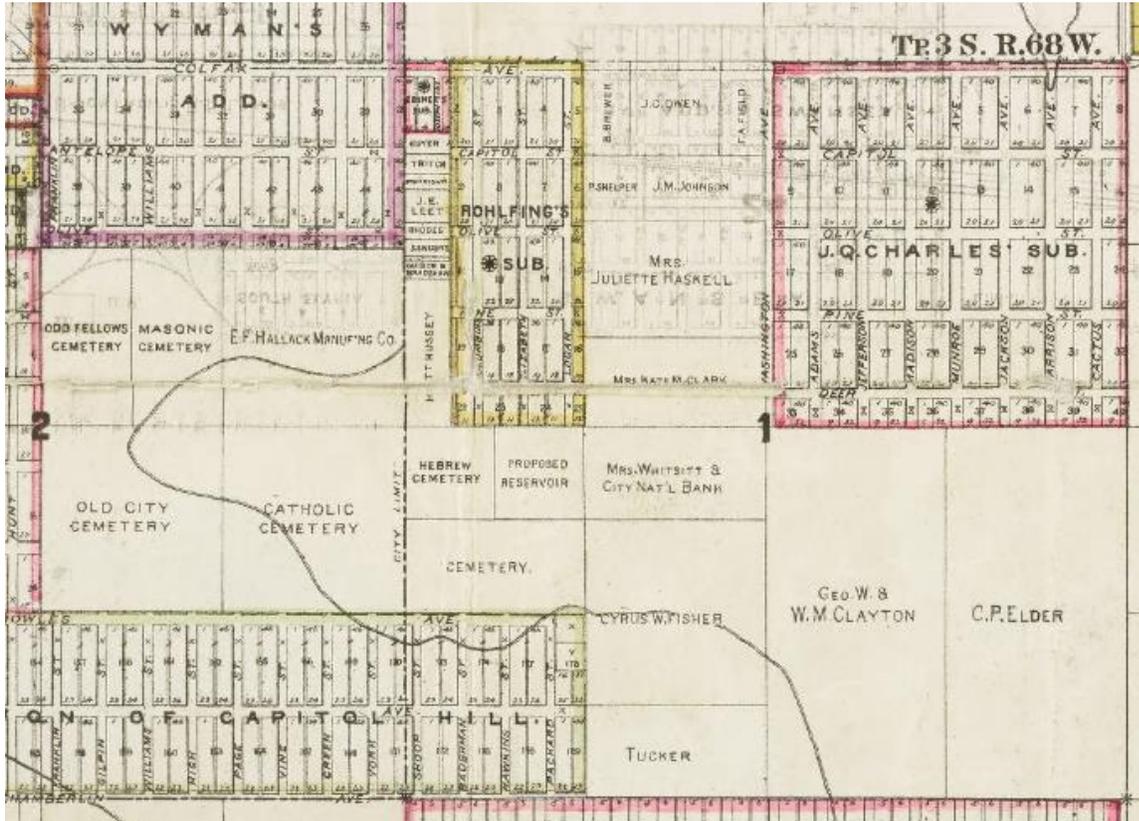

The land was owned by the United States government until 1872 when the City of Denver purchased it for $1.25 an acre.³ Title for the property was transferred to the City with the stipulation that the land continued to be used for burials.

When Riverside Cemetery opened north of the city in 1876, new burials on Cemetery Hill began to decline. Riverside’s park-like setting, with lush greenery and winding paths, prompted many families to choose it over Cemetery Hill for the final resting place of their loved ones. With the falling number of burials, other uses were found for unused sections of the cemetery. A portion of the northeast corner of Cemetery Hill became a Denver Water Company reservoir in 1888.⁴

In 1890 the City petitioned Congress for permission to convert twenty acres of Cemetery Hill into a city park to serve the developing area. Permission was granted and burials were ordered stopped. As a result of a lawsuit filed by the Catholic Archdiocese, burials were allowed to continue in Mount Calvary until 1908.⁵

A second reservoir was constructed by Denver Water in 1906, adding 30 million gallons of capacity. Pumping equipment and buildings, still located on the site, were constructed in 1908.⁶

Today's Cheesman Park was originally known as Congress Park but was renamed in 1907 for Denver businessman Walter Scott Cheesman. Following his death that year, Cheesman's widow gave the City $100,000 to rename the park in honor of her late husband. Following much public opposition, Mayor Robert Speer signed an ordinance changing the name of Congress Park to Cheesman Park.

Today's Congress Park did not receive its name until the mid-1950s. The area south of the water reservoirs served as city nurseries until 1939 when it was converted to a city park.⁷ Initially unnamed, the park became known as Victory Park during World War II when it was the site of community victory gardens.⁸

In 1887 Denver's eastern city limit stood at York Street, a somewhat ambitious boundary given that few buildings existed east of the site of the Colorado State Capitol, a mile to the west. Today's Congress Park neighborhood consisted of mostly vacant, un-platted land controlled by well-to-do Denverites waiting for the right time to cash in on their investment.

That right time came in 1887 with the incorporation of the Colfax Avenue Railway. Founded by a group of real estate developers, the railway ran between York Street and Quebec Street, the western edge of the Town of Montclair. Investors in the operation included the founder of Montclair, Baron Walter Von Richthofen, and Donald Fletcher, founder of the Town of Fletcher. Fletcher is now the city of Aurora.

Service for the new railway began at the end of 1887, providing seamless transportation between Montclair and the established Denver core. A real estate frenzy ensued, with owners of the land surrounding the new railway platting their holdings or selling out to someone else who did. Plats for most Congress Park subdivisions were filed between 1887 and 1890.

Residential development began in the far northwest corner of the neighborhood, first on the blocks along York and Josephine streets and then on the blocks immediately to the east. Building permits show many of these homes were designed by the city's top architects and owned by successful Denverites.

Architect William Lang and his partner Marshall Pugh designed a number of substantial Queen Anne-style homes in northwest Congress Park. Lang and Pugh designed dozens of ornate buildings throughout the city, often combining the sturdiness and stonework of the Richardsonian Romanesque style with the delicacy of the Queen Anne style. Their notable work includes the Molly Brown house at 1340 Pennsylvania Street, St. Mark's Parish Church at 1160 Lincoln Street, and the Ghost Building at 18th and Stout streets. In Congress Park, they designed a $20,000 home for attorney James H. Blood on the corner of 13th Avenue and Columbine Street. Marshall Pugh built his own distinctive home right next door.

Not all homes built in Congress Park at this time were architect-designed. The Fleming Brothers were active builders here, though they are perhaps best known for their work around the same time in Denver's Baker neighborhood. Originally from western Pennsylvania, the brothers were in Denver by 1886 and operated a lumber mill and bank in addition to constructing homes, many on speculation. From the late 1880s and into the early 1910s, the brothers built hundreds of homes throughout the city. In 1891 the Flemings built side-by-side nearly-identical Victorian Cottages at 1350 and 1354 Clayton Street in Congress Park.

While little residential development occurred during this early period beyond the northwest corner of Congress Park, attempts were made to lure potential buyers eastward. Developers James Leonard and John C. Montgomery established the Monroe Street Horse Car Line in 1889, transporting riders from Colfax Avenue along Clayton Street, 12th Avenue, and Monroe Street to the line's termination at 6th Avenue.⁹ Along with Donald Fletcher, the pair built eight speculative homes along the route – four on the 800 block of Monroe Street, and four on the 1100 block of Monroe. Permits show the homes were designed by the Baerresen Brothers, designers and builders of many notable Denver buildings including the El Jebel Shrine at 1770 Sherman Street and the Romeo Block at West 29th Avenue and Zuni Street.

The Monroe Street Horse Car line was short-lived, only operating for about a year. The 1905 Baist Real Estate Atlas shows that fifteen years after their construction, the homes built by Montgomery, Leonard and Fletcher were still the only residences on their respective blocks. Six of the eight homes are still standing, though all have been modified to some degree.

Residential development wasn't the only activity in Congress Park during these early years. Many Jewish newcomers to Denver suffered from tuberculosis and were drawn to the city because of its climate, reputed to be beneficial. In 1892 the Jewish Hospital Association laid the cornerstone for the Frances Jacobs Memorial Hospital, the precursor to today's National Jewish Health Center, at 14th Avenue and Colorado Boulevard. The hospital was named for Frances Wisebart Jacobs, a tireless worker for Denver's needy, who had died earlier that year. Construction of the facility stalled in 1893 with the economic downturn resulting from the Silver Panic. The hospital was the first of many facilities for tubercular patients built in the Denver area, including the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society (JCRS) in Lakewood (1903), the Oakes Home in north Denver (1894), National Swedish Hospital in Englewood (1908), and the Agnes Memorial Sanatorium in east Denver (1904).

There was little commercial activity in Congress Park at this time. The Colfax Avenue Floral Company, located on a large piece of land at the northeast corner of Colfax Avenue and York Street, was the only commercial business located in the area.

In 1893, boom times in Capitol Heights came to an end with the start of a crushing economic depression. Residential development throughout the city stalled and the new hospital was put on hold as operating funds dried up.

1893-1897: The Silver Panic and Ensuing Depression

Early in Denver's history, silver fueled much of the city's growth and development. The city was home to mining machinery manufacturers and to smelters that processed the ore. These industries employed thousands of Denver residents, as did the railroads that transported the precious metal between the mines and the smelters. Nearly all members of Denver's elite class, and many in the middle class as well, held investments in Colorado's silver mines.¹⁰

All of this silver-based prosperity ceased in 1893 when President Grover Cleveland repealed the Sherman Silver Purchase Act. Passed in 1890, the act propped up the price of silver by requiring the United States government to purchase large amounts of the precious metal. Fearing that the act was depressing the price of gold, Cleveland repealed it, sending the economies of Denver, and Colorado in general, into a tailspin. Silver prices fell and the stock market crashed. Half of the city's financial institutions failed, and many Denver residents whose wealth or jobs were based on silver lost everything.¹¹

In Congress Park, as in the rest of the city, development ceased. It wasn't until the end of the decade that the city began to rebound.

1898-1904: Recovery and Expansion

After several years, Denver slowly emerged from the recession. Real estate development continued to slump through the end of the century, but rebounded with a vengeance as the 20th century began. Over 8,000 building permits for single-unit homes were issued in Denver between 1900 and 1910.¹² Residential development in Congress Park picked up where it left off on the blocks in the northwest section of the neighborhood. By this time, over-the-top Victorian detailing had become passé and styles such as Edwardian and Dutch Colonial Revival, which featured more classical elements, became the norm.

By 1901 a streetcar line was in place along E. 12th Avenue, extending as far east as Fillmore Street. Residential development followed along on the blocks surrounding the streetcar route. The Foursquare, a building form that came to dominate many blocks in the neighborhood, first appeared in Congress Park during this time. Early Foursquares were plain, with few stylistic elements.

In 1903 Frank S. Snell, a local Denver real estate developer, subdivided part of the existing Capitol Avenue Subdivision. For his subdivision, located between 14th and Colfax avenues and Cook and Madison streets, Snell redesigned the existing plan to create east-west streets and alleys, allowing for more homes to be constructed in the same amount of space. Snell's Subdivision is now a Denver landmark district.

Apartment buildings were becoming commonplace in Denver as residents moved toward living spaces requiring less upkeep. This trend did not immediately take hold in Congress Park. Early multi-unit structures in the neighborhood were duplexes, similar in architectural style and massing to the single-unit residences surrounding them.

The first commercial buildings in Congress Park were built early in the new century, mainly along Colfax Avenue near the York Street streetcar stop. The buildings housed a variety of businesses catering to streetcar commuters and nearby residents alike, including drug stores, barbers, bakeries, tailors, and cobblers.¹³

The Frances Jacobs Memorial Hospital, mothballed several years earlier, was opened in 1899 with the support of several national Jewish organizations and the encouragement of Rabbi William Friedman and Denver businessman Louis Anfenger.¹⁴ To honor its supporters and highlight its mission of treating tuberculosis patients, the hospital was renamed the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives.¹⁵

As the population of Congress Park grew, support buildings such as fire stations and schools were constructed. Fire Station No. 15, located at E. 11th Avenue and Clayton Street, began operation in 1904. Like all Denver fire stations of the time, it used horse-drawn equipment. According to Denver historian Phil Goodstein, the station was the last to convert to modern equipment, retiring the last of its horses in 1924.¹⁶

1905-1929: Congress Park Fills Out

Inspired by what he saw at the 1893 Columbian Exposition in Chicago, Robert Speer set about transforming Denver from a somewhat shabby and chaotic city into an orderly, clean, and park-like place when he took office as the city's mayor in 1904. During his three terms in office Speer led Denver's transformation, constructing the Municipal Auditorium and the city's Civic Center and beautifying Cherry Creek. The city's park acreage was more than doubled between 1904 and 1912.¹⁸

While changes were being made throughout the city, Congress Park was also undergoing its own transformation. By 1907 the 12th Avenue streetcar line was extended to Madison Street where it met a newly constructed line running north to south between Colfax and 6th avenues. Small commercial nodes developed along 12th Avenue at Elizabeth and Madison streets. Both nodes included grocery and drug stores as well as other small shops catering to the neighborhood.¹⁹

The extension of public transportation helped fuel residential development in Congress Park, and it was during this time that most of the homes in the neighborhood were built. Many small-scale real estate developers were active in the neighborhood. Often, they would purchase multiple lots on a block and construct, on speculation, a row of homes with similar massing and floor plans but slightly different stylistic elements. Andreas Ericksen was one such builder. Ericksen built nearly three-dozen homes in Congress Park between 1906 and 1914, including most of those on the 1300 and 1400 blocks of Milwaukee Street. Most of Ericksen’s homes were Foursquares, notable for their quality and architectural detailing.

As development marched eastward through Congress Park, building forms shifted from boxy two-story Foursquares with classical detailing to modest one-story bungalows in the Craftsman style. Nearly 1,000 bungalows were built in Congress Park between 1906 and 1929.

An increase in multi-unit residential development also occurred during this era. Most new multi-unit homes were Craftsman-style duplexes, though several small-scale apartment blocks were also built around this time. Both building types were similar in scale and architectural style to the surrounding single-unit homes.

In 1925, the City adopted its first zoning code. The faceblocks along Colfax between Grant Street and Colorado Boulevard were zoned for business, hastening the change from what had primarily been a residential street toward commercial use.²⁰ Business development along Colfax Avenue crept eastward, filling in vacant lots and replacing existing homes.

Community buildings, including churches and schools, continued to be built during this period to support the growing neighborhood population. Capitol Heights Presbyterian Church, located at the northeast corner of E. 11th Avenue and Fillmore Street, was dedicated in 1912. The church was built to serve the congregation of the York Street Presbyterian Church, founded in 1895, which originally met in a tent at E. 13th Avenue and York Street.²¹

The National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives grew significantly during this period, adding a number of buildings to their campus and expanding to the east side of Colorado Boulevard with the opening of the B'nai B'rith infirmary building in 1926.

In 1924 the University of Colorado Medical School relocated to a new campus on the east side of Colorado Boulevard, just south of 9th Avenue. The campus included a quadrangle of red brick buildings, including a medical school, a nursing school, and a public teaching hospital that cared for those too poor to pay.²⁴

The expansion of National Jewish and the addition of the medical school drove development along both sides of Colorado Boulevard. Just south of National Jewish, single-unit homes, duplexes, and small apartment buildings were constructed. At the intersection of 8th Avenue and Colorado, commercial buildings with multiple storefronts were built at the northwest and southeast corners. Both buildings contained drugstores and other retail concerns catering to the new medical school and to surrounding residents.

The tremendous growth experienced in Congress Park and across the city came to a halt in 1929 with the stock market crash and resulting depression.

Tops Down and Bottoms Up: 1930-1945

The Great Depression brought the city's worst economic downturn since the Silver Crash of 1893. Banks and businesses failed, and unemployment in the city reached 25%. Despite the poor economy, Denver saw its population continue to increase. Some limited construction continued during the 1930s, mostly of apartment buildings and homes for the affluent.²⁵

As the United States entered World War II, Denver became a military town. Between 1940 and 1943 the city's population grew by another 4% due to an influx of military and civilian personnel working at military installations such as Lowry Field, Fort Logan, and the Denver Medical Depot. Despite these new residents, construction slowed further still as building materials were earmarked for projects deemed essential to the war effort. In 1943, only 529 new housing units were constructed in the city. Existing buildings, including those formerly used for commercial purposes, were remodeled to provide living space to accommodate these new Denver residents.²⁶

Development in Congress Park during this period mirrored what was happening in the rest of the city. Only seventy-nine buildings were constructed in the neighborhood between 1930 and 1945. Most were single-unit homes built early in this period in the English Norman Cottage and Mediterranean Revival styles.

Twenty-six multi-unit buildings were built in Congress Park during this period, all between 1930 and 1932 and most on previously vacant lots. This followed a citywide trend where apartment living became an attractive option for many Denverites. The architectural and engineering firm of F. W. Ireland Jr. and E. W. Parr designed several notable apartment buildings in Congress Park during this time, including the Avon Masonic Apartments at 1282 Detroit Street and the Calais Apartments at 1165 Columbine Street. The firm's revival style buildings in central Denver extended to the Moorish Revival Aladdin Theater on E. Colfax Avenue (demolished), and the Spanish Revival style Gardenia and Cordova apartments in Capitol Hill.

The streetcar continued to be the main form of transportation for most Denver residents, though the automobile was becoming increasingly commonplace. In Congress Park, increased car ownership was evident in the number of new garages built on the lots of pre-existing homes. It was also seen in the filling stations and automobile sales and service businesses that began to appear along Colfax Avenue.

Colfax saw a great deal of change during this time, with many long-standing single-unit homes converted to apartments or to commercial use. Others were simply demolished. Commercial additions were added to the front façade of a number of existing homes along Colfax Avenue, taking advantage of commercial zoning and increased street traffic.

Colorado Boulevard began to take its current form during this period, with large apartment blocks and commercial buildings filling in previously undeveloped lots.

Retooling Denver for the Modern Age: 1946-1982

Despite Denver's growth in the years preceding World War II, the city's infrastructure had not kept pace with other western cities such as Seattle and Los Angeles. According to historians Stephen Leonard and Tom Noel, Denver "seemed to be resting, reflecting on the past rather than betting on the future."²⁷

After the war ended, Denver's population swelled with thousands of ex-military personnel who had decided to make the city home. The passage of the Serviceman's Readjustment Act, commonly known as the GI Bill, in 1944 provided low interest loans to veterans wanting to start businesses, pursue an education, or to buy a home.

Denver's population increase, coupled with the rising availability and reliance on the automobile, helped fuel the flight to the suburbs. The streetcar system was phased out in 1950, though remnants of the system, including the small neighborhood commercial districts, remained.

²⁷ Leonard and Noel, 237.

The effects of these changes could be seen in Congress Park. The neighborhood was largely built out during the years preceding World War II, and fewer than thirty single-unit homes were built in the neighborhood between 1946 and 1982. Most of these were Minimal Traditional and Ranch type homes constructed on previously vacant lots.

*1282 Monroe Street, built in 1949.

Nearly 70% of the buildings constructed in Congress Park during this time were multi-unit. Some were constructed on one of the few remaining vacant lots, while others replaced aging single-unit homes in the northwest quadrant of the neighborhood. Most apartment blocks were three or four stories with a simpler, modernist design not seen in building constructed before the war.

The Aruba Apartments at 1262 Clayton Street were built in 1962 and are representative of the many apartment blocks constructed in Congress Park in the 1950s and 1960s. Discover Denver photo.

As tuberculosis cases diminished in the 1940s, National Jewish expanded its mission to include treatment of other pulmonary diseases, including asthma. The hospital campus continued to evolve during this time, with original buildings being razed to make way for new ones. Due to the increasing need for parking, the hospital bought single-unit homes along the eastern edge of the Congress Park neighborhood, demolishing them to create surface parking.²⁸

In 1947, Rose Memorial Hospital was constructed northeast of the University of Colorado Medical campus. Just two years later the Veteran's Administration Hospital was built just to the west of Rose. The university's medical school also continued to expand its presence on the east side of Colorado Boulevard during this time. The enlarged presence of the combined medical campus influenced the construction of retail businesses and apartments along Colorado Boulevard.

Congress Park Today

Today's Congress Park looks much as it did in the mid-20th century, with rows of bungalows and foursquares lining most streets. The small commercial districts along E. 12th Avenue, originally built during the streetcar era, still contain businesses that serve the neighborhood. Commercial storefronts have been modified to accommodate new businesses, but largely retain their historic forms.

While in recent years Denver has seen many smaller older homes razed to make way for large residences and multi-unit buildings, Congress Park has been impacted to a limited extent by this trend.

NOTE: Historical contexts related to Denver's history and building types have been developed for Discover Denver and are available on the project website at www.DiscoverDenver.CO.

6. RESULTS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Summary

A total of 2,409 parcels were surveyed in the Congress Park survey area. Vacant parcels and buildings less than thirty years of age were surveyed at the Foundation level, while more information was gathered on those buildings that were over thirty years of age. Because of the relatively good historic physical integrity of most of the buildings in the survey area, the majority (88%) were surveyed at the Evaluation level. 111 individual buildings were surveyed at the Enhanced level and were evaluated for historical, architectural, or cultural significance. Six areas were identified as having a concentration of buildings with architectural, cultural, or historical significance.

Survey Levels

The majority of properties surveyed in the Congress Park survey area were documented at the Evaluation level. Parcels surveyed at the Foundation level are those that contain buildings less than thirty years of age or no buildings at all. Buildings surveyed at the Descriptive survey level were over thirty years of age but had major alterations. Those surveyed at the Evaluation level were over thirty years of age and were unaltered or had alterations that were considered minor or moderate. Buildings surveyed at the Enhanced level were researched and evaluated for historical or cultural significance.

Survey Level	Description	Count
Foundation	Vacant parcels or less than 30 years old	59
Descriptive	Over 30 years old with major alterations	124
Evaluation	Over 30 years old with good integrity	2115
Enhanced	Evaluated for significance	111

Years of Construction

Development in the Congress Park neighborhood occurred in fits and starts. Nearly 200 buildings remain that were constructed in the years leading up to the 1893 Silver Panic. Most of these are in the northwestern section of the neighborhood. Development stalled in the years following the Panic but recovered around the turn of the century. Nearly 80% of the buildings in Congress Park were constructed between 1900 and 1929, and 83% of these were built as single-unit homes.

Less than 100 buildings were constructed in each subsequent decade, with the number of multi-unit homes outpacing single-unit homes.

Building Forms and Styles

For purposes of this report and the Discover Denver project more generally, a distinction is made between building forms and architectural styles. Building forms are generally identified by the organization of a building's plan and massing. For example, the Foursquare building form is so-called because it is organized, in plan, into four zones of similar size in a square configuration. On the other hand, architectural styles are identified by design features applied to the building. Like clothing, architectural styles come and go according to what is in vogue at any period in time. The Queen Anne architectural style, characterized by over-the-top detailing such as textured shingles, patterned masonry and spindle-work was "in style" between the late-1880s and late-1890s. After the turn of the century, few Queen Anne homes were constructed as homeowners opted for styles, such as Edwardian, with more classical elements.

It should be noted that in even the most scholarly discussions, the concepts of style and form are sometimes used interchangeably. For instance, McAlester notes that the term "bungalow" was used in the early 1900s to describe small homes constructed in the Craftsman style and that it was only after 1920 that the bungalow was understood as a type to which other styles could be applied.²⁹

Likewise, some buildings may have a building form but no clear architectural style. Such buildings are documented by Discover Denver with the appropriate form and an architectural style of "No Style."

Architectural Styles

In the Congress Park survey area, the Discover Denver team observed thirty-four architectural styles, as well as numerous examples of buildings that, while carrying no specific style, exhibited identifiable stylistic elements. The following tables present the most commonly observed architectural styles in the survey area.

²⁹ McAlester, p. 578

Classical Revival

Date Range: 1890s – 1920s

Common Features:

- Large or distinctive porch columns with pronounced capitals
- Pediments
- Dentils
- Classical frieze

1432 Madison Street (1906)

Colonial Revival

Date Range: 1890s – 1920s

Common Features:

- Symmetrical facade
- Pediments
- Portico
- Simple porch columns
- Dormers
- Shutters

2901 E. 9th Avenue (1925)

Craftsman

Date Range: 1900s – 1930s

Common Features:

- Exposed rafter tails
- Knee braces at gable ends
- Hip-on-gable or cross-gable roof
- False half-timbering or open trussing
- Substantial masonry porch piers, often splayed

633 Cook Street (1918)

Dutch Colonial Revival

Date Range: 1890s – 1910s

Common Features:

- Gambrel roof
- One-and-a-half stories
- Porch with simplified columns
- Round window in gable

1440 Josephine Street (1898)

Edwardian

Date Range: 1900s – 1910s

Common Features:

- Similar to Queen Anne, but less ornate
- Asymmetrical façade
- Simplified ornamentation
- Simple columns and other classical elements

1144 Madison Street (1908)

English Norman Cottage

Date Range: 1920s – 1940s

Common Features:

- Steeply pitched roof
- Steeply pitched gable entrance
- Decorative brickwork
- Arched entrance
- Casement windows, often with divided lights

766 Monroe Street (1928)

Modern Movement

Date Range: 1940s – 1960s

Common Features:

- Flat roof
- Horizontal emphasis
- Minimal decoration or artistic features

1283 Elizabeth Street (1954)

Queen Anne

Date Range: 1880s – 1890s

Common Features:

- Asymmetrical façade
- Gable ends with decorative shingles
- Turned spindle porch supports
- Multiple gables, usually with decorative shingles
- Bargeboard on gable ends
- Ornate brick patterning
- Two or more stories

1418 Elizabeth Street (1893)

Victorian Cottage

Date Range: 1890s – 1910s

Common Features:

- Simplified Queen Anne style elements
- Front gable roof
- One to one-and-a-half stories

1102 Clayton Street (1891)

Building Forms/Types

The Discover Denver project documented thirty different building forms in the Congress Park survey area, with an additional sixty-nine buildings documented as “Other” in the building form field because they did not fit any of the identified building forms in the database. Many of the buildings documented as having an “Other” form had poor historic physical integrity.

The following building forms and/or types are presented within Single-unit, Multi-unit, and Commercial categories and are present in sufficient quantities to be considered character-defining for the Congress Park area.

Single-Unit Residential Building Forms/Types

The majority (78%) of buildings in the Congress Park survey area were documented as single-unit homes. Most (51.3%) of these single-unit homes were of the Bungalow form, while most other single-unit buildings were distributed across other identifiable types/forms.

Single-Unit Buildings

Properties Evaluated for Significance

Of the properties documented during field survey (no designated properties were recorded), 10% (N=238) were documented as having no alterations visible from the public right of way. Additionally, 78% (N=1867) were documented as having minor or moderate alterations (e.g., window replacement or subordinate rear additions) indicating that, while they may be too altered to be individually architecturally significant, they carry sufficient historic integrity to easily convey their history to passers-by and still have the ability to contribute to the historic landscape of the survey area.

The exceptional integrity of the buildings throughout the Congress Park neighborhood, along with their age and general association with early business leaders of Denver, made the selection of properties for historical research and Enhanced level survey exceptionally difficult. Nearly every property researched had the possibility of uncovering information that could determine it significant.

Of the total buildings recorded in the survey area, 111 buildings or 4.6% percent were selected for Enhanced survey. In most cases buildings were selected because field observations supported the possibility that they might be architecturally significant. In a few cases, property owners or community members informed surveyors in the field that the building had aspects to its history that might indicate historical or cultural significance. The following table lists the buildings evaluated at the Enhanced level, along with their determinations of eligibility at the local, national, and state levels.

This list should not by any means be considered a complete list of potentially significant properties in the survey area; more data than was available from right-of-way survey would be required to make that determination. Any building in the neighborhood for which sufficient historic physical integrity and historic, cultural, or geographical importance can be shown should be considered to be potentially significant.

Areas of Significance

For the purposes of the Discover Denver project, an “Area of Significance” is identified as an area having a concentration of buildings in which most buildings retain their historic physical integrity and have the ability to convey a shared history. Overall, buildings across the entire Congress Park survey area have excellent physical integrity, though several areas have lost the ability to convey their history due to the encroachment of development.

Six “Areas of Significance” were identified in the survey area, each having excellent physical integrity in its own right and having a unique story to tell about the history of the Congress Park neighborhood.

Six areas of significance were identified within the Congress Park survey area.

Area of Significance #1: High-Style Homes

Area of Significance #1 is made up of Block 10 of Morgan’s Subdivision of Capitol Hill. Substantial architect-designed homes, built in various styles between 1920 and 1950, line the 800 block of York and Josephine streets. The homes are separated from the remainder of the Congress Park neighborhood by the park itself and by the Denver Water reservoirs. Early owners of these homes include titans of Denver business, including John W. Springer, president of the Continental Trust Company, building contractor Edward Seerie, and Edward F. Harrison, secretary of the Harrison Motor Car Company.

818 York Street, constructed 1925

830 York Street, constructed 1932

848 York Street, constructed 1926

865 Josephine Street, constructed 1940

Area of Significance #2: Bungalow Heaven

Area of Significance #2 is an irregularly shaped area stretching eastward from Detroit Street to Harrison Street between the E. 7th Avenue Historic District and E. 10th Avenue before it reaches northward to E. 13th Avenue between Madison and Harrison streets. Nearly 90% of the homes in the area's boundaries were constructed between 1910 and 1929, and nearly three-quarters of these are Craftsman bungalows. In the southeastern quadrant of the area are later but compatible styles, such as English Norman Cottages dating to the 1930s.

825 Fillmore Street, constructed 1914

923 Madison Street, constructed 1920

801 Jackson Street, constructed 1937

1145 Garfield Street, constructed 1927

Area of Significance #3: March of Progress

Area of Significance #3 is made up of the center of the Congress Park neighborhood, stretching west to east from Elizabeth Street to Garfield Street and south to north from E. 10th Avenue to E. 14th Avenue. The area shows the progression of development from west to east across Congress Park, with buildings dating from the 1890s to the 1940s displaying a wide variety of architectural styles.

1331 Elizabeth Street, constructed 1896

1214 Detroit Street, constructed 1910

1136 Cook Street, constructed 1922

1255 Madison Street, constructed 1933

Area of Significance #4: More Bungalows

Area of Significance #4 is made up of a grouping of mostly Craftsman-style bungalows in the 600 block of Steele to Harrison streets. The homes are similar in age and style to those found in Area of Significance #2, but are separated from them by the East 7th Avenue Historic District.

602 Adams Street, constructed 1914

619 Madison Street, constructed 1921

629 Garfield Street, constructed 1924

614 Jackson Street, constructed 1924

Area of Significance #5: Early Colfax Influence

Area of Significance #5 stretches from Detroit Street to Monroe Street along the 1400 blocks of the north-south running residential streets, with the Snell's Subdivision local landmark district in their midst. The homes in this area are an eclectic mix of building forms and styles, with most dating from 1890 to 1910. The buildings harken back to a time when Colfax Avenue was a grand residential boulevard. Colfax Avenue itself has seen a great deal of demolition and new development along this stretch, and most buildings along it would not contribute to the area of significance.

1440 Detroit Street, constructed 1898

1468 Detroit Street, constructed 1896

1470 Steele Street, constructed 1894

1419 Fillmore Street, constructed 1890

Area of Significance #6: Early Capitol Heights

Area of Significance #6 is located in the far northwest corner of the Congress Park neighborhood and is made up of some of the earliest buildings in the neighborhood. The area is roughly C-shaped, and made up of the blocks along Josephine Street between E. 11th and Colfax avenues, the 1400 block between Josephine and Clayton streets, and the area north of Congress Park and south of E. 11th Avenue. Construction dates range from the late-1880s to the early 1900s.

1235 Josephine Street, constructed 1890

1400 Columbine Street, constructed 1897

1420 Josephine Street, constructed 1891

1121 Josephine Street, constructed 1893

Conclusion

Congress Park is unique in that its tree-lined streets, neat brick homes, and streetcar commercial districts have remained remarkably unchanged for nearly a century. While redevelopment has severely altered many parts of the city, Congress Park has thus far been minimally impacted, thanks in large part to its diligent residents.

As the city of Denver evolves, landscapes that convey its history grow ever more critical. Through its buildings and landscape, the history of Congress Park and its place in the city's growth are able to clearly shine through. The hope is that through the work of Discover Denver, residents and visitors to Congress Park will be able to better understand and value this special neighborhood.

8. SURVEY LOG

Evaluations made as a part of this survey project are intended to assist city staff, property owners, and other interested parties with understanding a property’s potential significance. These evaluations may be revised in the future should additional information be discovered, or if the property no longer retains its historic physical integrity.

A determination of significance or eligibility does not formally designate a resource as a historic landmark or put any restrictions on it. Designation would require a significant level of community support and the successful completion of a rigorous public process.

Evaluation Code	Description
E	Resource has architectural, historical, or cultural significance.
L30	Resource is less than 30 years of age and was not evaluated.
ND	More data is needed to evaluate significance.
NE	Resource has been found not to have significance, or has had major alterations.
C	Resource would contribute to an area of significance.
L30	Resource is less than 30 years of age and was not evaluated for significance.
NC	Resource has had major alterations and would not contribute to an area of significance.
E (Criteria)	Resource has sufficient significance for listing in the National Register under the noted criteria.
L30	Resource is less than 30 years of age and was not evaluated.
ND	More data is needed to evaluate this resource’s eligibility for listing in the National Register or State Register.
NE	Resource lacks the significance required for listing in the National Register or State Register.
SR (Criteria)	Resource has sufficient significance for listing in the State Register under the noted criteria.
C	Resource would contribute to a National Register historic district.
L30	Resource is less than 30 years of age and was not evaluated for significance.
NC	Resource would not contribute to a National Register historic district.
