How to Use This Report

This survey report provides an overview of Discover Denver’s work and findings in the Sunnyside survey area. Section 1 through Section 4 discuss the Discover Denver project in general, the Sunnyside survey area more specifically, and the methodology used by the project. A historic context of Sunnyside, discussing how the area developed from its earliest times to the present day, is found in Section 5. Section 6, Results and Recommendations, contains an analysis of prevalent building forms and architectural styles found in the survey area, and highlights concentrations of buildings that have a unique story to tell. Section 7 outlines references used to compile the historic context. A survey log containing high-level information for each building documented, as well as determinations for each related to designation at the local, state, and national levels is found in Section 8.

1. DISCOVER DENVER OVERVIEW

Project Purpose

Discover Denver is a point-in-time survey of the city’s buildings which summarizes the history of each Denver neighborhood, documents each neighborhood’s buildings, and highlights buildings with architectural, historical, or cultural significance. Led by Historic Denver, Inc. in collaboration with the City and County of Denver, this project utilizes advanced technology to accelerate the pace of historic resource survey and improve the consistency of data collection. Project methodology is based on the Multiple Property Documentation Approach and the Historic Context Statement framework developed by the National Park Service.

Denver covers a land area of 154 square miles and contains approximately 160,000 primary buildings. As of the beginning of the survey covered by this report, fewer than 11% of these buildings had been surveyed for historical and architectural significance. In 2021 the City and County of Denver received and approved more than 700 demolition permits. Consequently, Denver is at risk of losing many properties that tell the story of the city’s evolution and the people, events, ethnic and cultural heritages, and architectural styles that make Denver a special and interesting place to live.

Recent studies have shown that economic development occurs in historic districts at seven times the rate of other areas. According to The Economic Power of Heritage and Place (The Colorado Historical Foundation, 2011) and Preservation for a Changing Colorado (Colorado Preservation, Inc., 2017), investment in historic resources creates jobs, attracts businesses, and generates income from consumer visitation and spending. The purpose of Discover Denver is to identify those special places in our community where rehabilitation and investment will preserve our city’s unique identity and promote quality of life for generations to come.

Project History

Discover Denver is a multi-phase project. Initial methodology was developed in 2010-2011, patterned after that used by the City of Los Angeles for its own citywide building survey, SurveyLA. The methodology was tested in Discover Denver's Pilot Phase (2012-2015) and in subsequent phases of the project the methodology has been refined as new technologies have become available and project staff have found ways to make data collection more efficient. The following table outlines the areas surveyed by Discover Denver, by project phase, and the number of properties documented in each survey area. Individual survey reports are available on the project website for each area surveyed.

Phase 4 of Discover Denver will survey the Sunnyside, Wellshire, South City Park, and Westwood neighborhoods of the city. This report covers Sunnyside, the first of the Phase 4 neighborhoods to be documented.

2. INTRODUCTION: SUNNYSIDE

Field survey efforts in the Sunnyside survey area began in May of 2021. All work was performed according to the general methods previously established by the project, with any changes or variations described in the Research Design and Methods section of this report. Survey of Sunnyside took place from May to October of 2021, with documentation of a small number of properties missed in the first effort documented in April 2022. Data for a total of 3,346 parcels was collected and uploaded to the Discover Denver database. As with prior Discover Denver surveys, the bulk of the properties were surveyed by trained volunteers and Discover Denver staff. Properties and districts landmarked by the City and County of Denver were excluded from the survey.

3. PROJECT AREA

The Sunnyside survey area consisted of buildings within the Sunnyside statistical neighborhood, bounded by Inca Street (east), W. 38th Avenue (south), Federal Boulevard (west), and I-70 (north). The boundaries for the survey area are shown on the map below.

The eastern edge of Sunnyside is mostly industrial, capitalizing on its proximity to the nearby railroad tracks. To the north, Interstate 70 serves as a barrier separating Sunnyside from its neighbor to the north, Chaffee Park. Most north-south streets end at W. 48th Avenue, which parallels I-70, and only Pecos and Zuni streets allow through traffic to continue to the north into Chaffee Park. Federal Boulevard and W. 38th Avenue, Sunnyside's western and southern boundaries, are both commercial corridors lined mostly with commercial buildings and parking lots, though some residences are also found on these streets.

The interior blocks of the Sunnyside neighborhood are lined with residences dating from the 1880s to the present day. One- and two-story Queen Anne and Craftsman-style homes are intermixed with modest mid-century residences and two- and three-story dwellings built in the last ten years. One- and two-story commercial buildings are found on some corners, indicating that a streetcar once passed by. The Quigg Newton Homes, a public housing complex constructed by the Denver Housing Authority in 1951, are found in the northwest corner of the neighborhood. Three city parks, La Raza Park, Sunnyside Park and Ciancio Park, are located in the eastern half of the neighborhood.

4. RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODS

Survey Objectives and Scope of Work

Discover Denver is a point-in-time survey of the city's buildings which summarizes the history of each Denver neighborhood, documents each neighborhood's buildings, and highlights buildings with architectural, historical, or cultural significance. Evaluations of individual buildings are made based on conditions found in the field at the time of survey, and, for select buildings for which historical research is performed, on resources available at the time. Physical changes occurring to a building after it is surveyed, or newly discovered information which sheds light on its historical or cultural significance, may impact future evaluations.

Using a hybrid reconnaissance-intensive approach, buildings were surveyed at one of four levels: Foundation, Descriptive, Evaluation, or Enhanced. Increasing levels of detail were collected based on a building's age, historic physical integrity, and potential for architectural, historical, or cultural significance.

- Foundation Level

At the Foundation level, electronic data regarding physical location, address, year of construction, and use was collected from the City and County of Denver. All properties were surveyed at the Foundation level.

- Descriptive Level:

At the Descriptive level, all buildings thirty years of age or older, regardless of historic physical integrity, were documented in the field. One to three photographs were taken of each building, and limited information, such as architectural style, building type, and level of modification, was collected. Buildings less than thirty years of age were logged and photographed, but no additional data was collected.

- Evaluation Level:

At the Evaluation level, detailed information regarding architectural style, building type, architectural features, and setting were collected on buildings greater than thirty years of age that retained their historic physical integrity. Field evaluations were made for each of these buildings based on their potential for individual architectural significance and on whether they were located in a cluster with other buildings having significance. Discover Denver survey forms were generated for each of these resources and provided to the State Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation.

- Enhanced Level:

Historical research was performed on selected buildings having potential architectural, historical, or cultural significance, or that were good representations of the greater building stock of the Sunnyside survey area. For each building researched, a Discover Denver Enhanced Survey Form, based on History Colorado's Architectural Inventory Form (1403), was completed. Each property was evaluated in terms of individual significance and significance as a part of a cluster of buildings having architectural, cultural, or historical significance at the national, state, and local levels.

Survey Exclusions

Buildings individually designated as historic landmarks by the City and County of Denver or those within Denver Historic Landmark Districts were excluded from the survey.

Project Participants

Discover Denver is a partnership between Historic Denver, Inc. and the City and County of Denver's Community Planning and Development Department. Trained community volunteers and interns played a significant role in the project, performing most of the field survey and historical research under the supervision of project staff.

File Search and Previous Survey Work

Identification of resources previously surveyed was performed in the Spring of 2021. In the past, a number of properties were determined officially eligible for listing in the National or State registers by the Colorado Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation. Some of these resources have subsequently been designated at the national, state, or local level. The following resources have previously been determined eligible but remain undesignated:

Currently Designated Resources

The Sunnyside neighborhood contains two individual properties that have been designated as Denver historic landmarks. It also contains individual properties that have been placed in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP) and the Colorado State Register of Historic Properties (SRHP).

Local = Denver Landmark; NRHP = National Register of Historic Places; SRHP = Colorado State Register of Historic Properties

Public Outreach

Public outreach occurred prior to beginning fieldwork. Discover Denver staff met with the city council representatives for the Sunnyside neighborhood to discuss the survey project and to answer any questions, and the registered neighborhood organization (RNO) in the survey area was contacted about upcoming fieldwork.

Survey Software and Database

To collect survey data, Discover Denver uses proprietary software that runs on handheld tablets. This software allows a surveyor to choose the appropriate level of survey for each resource and to take photographs with the tablet that will automatically be attached to the survey record. A web-based user interface allows Discover Denver staff to assign properties for survey, quality-check collected data, add historical information to a survey record, and generate survey forms for each property. Additionally, project staff can export survey data through the user interface for use in analysis and reporting.

Survey Fieldwork

Survey of the Sunnyside survey area took place from May to October of 2021. Data for a total of 3,347 parcels was uploaded to the Discover Denver database, with the bulk of the properties surveyed by trained volunteers overseen by Discover Denver staff. Properties that are currently landmarked by the City and County of Denver were excluded from the survey. Unbuilt parcels were included in the database but noted as having been unbuilt at the time of survey.

Before survey work began in the Sunnyside survey area, the master survey database was pre-populated with data acquired from the City and County of Denver. Pre-populated data included a unique site ID number, address and legal description, geographic information, and assessor's year of construction for the primary building on each parcel. As survey data was collected in the field and historical research was performed, this information was attached to the appropriate survey record.

Properties expected to be surveyed during a given survey shift were "assigned" through the master survey database by Discover Denver staff, allowing specific addresses to appear on the handheld tablets used by the survey volunteers. Volunteers met the survey shift leader at a predefined location to receive specific instructions and a tablet with which to collect data. They then worked independently or with a partner to survey each building, with the survey shift leader available to answer questions as needed.

A minimum of three photographs of each building surveyed was taken by the surveyor. These generally consisted of one facade photograph and two oblique photographs. In some instances, such as corner parcels, four or more photographs were taken in order to maximize information collected photographically.

Following field survey, Discover Denver staff quality checked tablet entries against photographs to ensure accuracy and legibility of data. For volunteers who were new to the project or who demonstrated a lower aptitude relative to their teammates, 100% of entries were checked. Because the Sunnyside survey area included a wide range of styles and types, the "Building Type" and "Architectural Style" fields were checked for most entries.

Historical Research

Historical research was performed on a select number of properties in the Sunnyside survey area. Properties were chosen for historical research based on their potential architectural, cultural, or historical significance, or on the ability of the resource to convey the unique history and architecture of the neighborhood. In some cases, properties were chosen based on anecdotal information provided to Discover Denver by residents of the neighborhood.

Historical research included the use of Denver assessor records to determine a chain of ownership and city directories to determine residents or businesses associated with a given property. Resources available in the Denver Public Library's Western History and Genealogy collections were used extensively. These resources included building permits, master property records, historical maps, census records, obituary indexes, and the full series of the Rocky Mountain News and the Denver Post newspapers.

Historical research was used to complete Discover Denver Enhanced survey forms and to evaluate researched properties for national, state, and local significance.

5. HISTORICAL OVERVIEW

We acknowledge with respect that the lands now occupied by the City and County of Denver are the traditional and ancestral homelands of the Arapaho, Cheyenne, and Ute Nations. These lands were also an important site of trade for numerous other Native tribes. We recognize the Indigenous peoples as original stewards of this land and their descendants that still reside here.

Early History

Before the Sunnyside neighborhood was developed, William H. Larimer, Jr. established the town of Highland on a bluff across the South Platte River from Denver in 1858. Through the 1860s and into the 1870s Highland was settled by Irish and Scottish immigrants drawn to the area for its affordability and proximity to jobs in the nearby rail yards and smelters.¹ However, the land now known as Sunnyside, north of present-day W. 38th Avenue (then named Prospect Avenue), remained largely undeveloped. The earliest plats in Sunnyside were the Sunnyside Addition in 1872—a three-block-square area bounded by W. 38th Avenue, W. 41st Avenue, and Tejon Street—and the adjacent Downing’s Addition to North Denver in 1871.²

Beginning in the late 1870s development increased in the oldest section of Sunnyside, located in the southeast corner of the neighborhood roughly between Zuni Street and Inca Street from W. 38th Avenue to W. 44th Avenue.³ In 1878 Nathaniel P. Hill built the Boston & Colorado Smelter just east of the railroad tracks near present-day W. 48th Avenue and established the Town of Argo, which straddled the current neighborhoods of Sunnyside and Globeville (see Figure 3).⁴ Many workers at the new smelter, particularly Scandinavian immigrants, moved to Sunnyside and built small homes. The Argo smelter remained one of the primary employers in the Sunnyside area until it burned down in 1911.⁵

The most important development in the history of Sunnyside was the extension of streetcar lines into the neighborhood in the late 1880s. The neighborhood soon grew as one of the city's new streetcar suburbs. Beginning in 1889 streetcars ran along W. 38th Avenue from Navajo Street to Fox Street, to the Argo smelter, and from Clay Street and Lowell Street. In the center of the neighborhood a line ran along Tejon Street from W. 38th Avenue to W. 44th Avenue, with a return loop along Vallejo Street and W. 41st Avenue. In 1908 the Denver Tramway Company constructed a line along W. 44th Avenue from Tejon to Federal Boulevard.

Other routes included a line on Lipan Street between W. 38th Avenue and W. 48th Avenue and a short-lived route along Clay Street from W. 38th Avenue to W. 43rd Avenue.⁷ The introduction of streetcars made it possible for more residents to settle in the new neighborhood and established the commercial corridors and nodes in the neighborhood. The earliest streetcars were slow by modern standards, taking up to an hour to reach downtown Denver, but provided reliable transportation for working people to the smelters and factories east of Sunnyside. The Victorian front-gable cottages on narrow lots that are still scattered throughout the southeast corner of Sunnyside are remnants of the early streetcar suburb in the 1890s, and likely housed working-class families of modest incomes.

Early residents also built scattered houses with small farms in the western and northern areas of Sunnyside. A few of these nineteenth-century houses remain throughout the neighborhood that were either farmhouses or the homes of more wealthy residents that could afford large residential plots beyond the city center. As the streetcar lines were electrified and expanded in the early twentieth century, transportation to downtown Denver became faster and more reliable. During these years the central and western areas of Sunnyside quickly shifted from agriculture to a solidly middle-class residential community.⁸

Denver's early twentieth century streetcar suburbs provided space for the population to spread out, particularly the new middle-class residents who worked administrative jobs in the city center as well as merchants who set up shop in the local commercial centers along the streetcar lines. Neighborhoods such as Sunnyside offered fresh air and affordable lots where residents could build a comfortable house with a spacious yard along tree-lined streets, away from the pollution and congestion of the city. The trend of middle-class development is reflected in the surviving houses, which include Classic Cottage, Bungalow, and Foursquare forms. A significant concentration of homes built between 1900 and 1920 along Umatilla Street between W. 38th Avenue and W. 44th Avenue showcases the stylistic variety of this era and Sunnyside's history as a middle-class streetcar suburb.

Denver's streetcars continued to operate in Sunnyside until 1950, and the era from 1920-1940 saw continued development within the neighborhood, particularly north of W. 44th Avenue. Bungalows continued to be the most popular house form during these years while Foursquares and Classic Cottages fell out of style. A notable change was the pattern of development. In contrast to the stylistic variety of the early twentieth century, the 1920s and 1930s saw more speculative construction with land developers filling in their additions with new standardized houses for sale to first-time residents. These areas feature regular lot sizes and house forms with subtle decorative variations that fill entire blocks. An excellent surviving example are the rows of small Bungalows in the Carlson Hill Addition (1924), located between Elm Court and Clay Street from W. 45th Avenue to W. 46th Avenue (see Figure 4).⁹ Another popular style in these years was the Tudor or English Norman Cottage, which features steep rooflines, arched doors and windows, and half-timbering.¹⁰ Smaller versions can be found scattered throughout most of Sunnyside, but a unique collection of larger examples remains at the southwest corner of Clay Street and 42nd Avenue.

Figure 4. These small Bungalows at Clay Street and W. 45th Avenue represent the shift from stylistic variety among Sunnyside's houses to more standardized and planned construction in the 1920s and 1930s. Mead & Hunt photograph, December 10, 2020.

In the early 1940s Denver's population grew rapidly as thousands of workers, and their families, came to Denver to fill factory jobs provided by the wartime economy.¹¹ After World War II Denver's housing crisis deepened as many servicemen returned from the war to settle in Colorado. These former GIs often found shelter in temporary housing around the city as residential developers worked to keep up with the demand for housing.¹² In northeast Sunnyside a "Quonset town" was constructed to house returning veterans in military-style Quonset huts. However, it was soon built over and the exact location is unclear.¹³ At the same time developers quickly built mass-produced Minimal Traditional homes in the undeveloped areas of Sunnyside, generally north of W. 45th Avenue and east of Zuni Street. One unique concentration is the Chaffee Park Subdivision (1945), between Tejon Street and Pecos Street from W. 44th Avenue to W. 46th Avenue, which includes rows of Minimal Traditional homes set on curvilinear streets.

By the 1950s most of Sunnyside had been developed into the residential neighborhood that exists today. The only remaining section was the northeast corner, which had previously been part of the Town of Argo and remained largely undeveloped. In the early 1950s the Denver Housing Authority constructed the 398- unit James Quigg Newton Homes in this area, which were later renovated in the 1990s.¹⁵ In the 1960s a small industrial area emerged at the northeastern edge of the neighborhood, coinciding with the construction of I-70 at the neighborhood's northern border along W. 48th Avenue.¹⁶

Communities and Occupations of Residents

The earliest residents of Sunnyside were northern European immigrants who came to Denver to work on the railroads and in the smelters. However, these immigrant groups did not settle in close enclaves and soon dispersed throughout the city. In contrast, the Italian immigrants who began arriving in the 1880s for similar jobs maintained a tight community well into the twentieth century. They first settled along "the Bottoms" near the South Platte River, but soon migrated north into Highland and Sunnyside and the area east of Zuni Street between W. 32nd Avenue and W. 46th Avenue became known as "Little Italy." Some of the first generation worked in factories, managed small truck farms, and worked as merchants in local grocery stores, bakeries, and other enterprises. The succeeding generations stayed in the neighborhood working in family businesses and moving into the newer middle-class areas of Sunnyside west of Zuni.

After World War II many Italian families moved out of the neighborhood to newer suburbs beyond the city limits.¹⁷ Latino residents began moving to Sunnyside in the early twentieth century. After World War II, as new mechanized farming methods replaced the armies of field laborers, the Latino community in Highland and Sunnyside grew steadily and made up more than two-thirds of the neighborhood population by 1990.¹⁸ The neighborhood was attractive to Latino residents due to the central location to large employers in the city and reasonable home prices. These residents led similar blue-collar middle-class lives as the previous Italian residents, working at nearby industrial jobs and running local businesses. In the 1960s and 1970s the Chicano Movement, or "El Movimiento," was a prominent social movement in Colorado and especially in Denver. El Movimiento celebrated the Latino community's Mexican and Indigenous roots and rejected the concept of Anglo superiority in society. It consisted of a broad coalition of labor, political, and academic organizations, as well as journalists and artists, organized around a central idea of promoting the lives of Chicano and Latino people in the United States. In Denver the movement included walkouts, boycotts, marches, and hunger fasts. In the northwest Denver

Religious Institutions

The neighborhood includes multiple structures that are important as religious centers and community gathering places. The North Denver Friends Church was built in 1899 at W. 41st Avenue and Shoshone Street, where the congregation met for nearly 50 years before moving to a new location at W. 45th Avenue and Eliot Street. The original North Denver Friends Church has been home to the Transfiguration of Our Lord Ukrainian Catholic Church since the 1940s.²⁰

Italians in Sunnyside established the St. Catherine of Sienna convent, parish, and school on Federal Boulevard in the 1920s, and constructed the current church in 1952 at 4200 Federal Boulevard (see Figure 7).²¹ The primary Catholic parish serving the Latino community was Our Lady of Guadalupe in the Highland neighborhood, but Latinos also established smaller protestant congregations in the post-World War II (postwar) period that remain important community centers and gathering spots in the neighborhood, such as the Denver Hispanic Seventh-Day Adventist Church at W. 44th Avenue and Pecos Street.²²

Parks and Schools

Sunnyside has three public parks that serve as central gathering spaces within the neighborhood. Columbus/La Raza Park is an especially significant public space. Occupying a block on W. 38th Avenue between Osage Street and Navajo Street purchased by the city in 1906, it was originally known as Navajo Park or the Northside Playground until the 1930s. In 1931 members of the Italian community raised money for improvements to the park and it was renamed Columbus Park, after the Italian explorer Christopher Columbus, to celebrate Italian contributions to United States history. The park included a pavilion/bath house and a swimming pool along with other amenities. In the 1960s and 1970s tensions between the Italian and Latino communities flared at Columbus Park, often involving the police, with tense standoffs over access to the pool and other facilities. Members of the Latino community fought to rename the park La Raza Park. La Raza translates to “the people,” or “the race,” and “Viva La Raza” was a rallying call within the Chicano Movement. In 1983 the pool was demolished and the current La Raza Plaza was built in its place in 1989, which includes a pyramid-shaped pavilion with murals referencing Latin American heritage (see Figure 8). In December 2020 the Denver City Council voted to rename Columbus Park to La Raza Park.²⁴

Other parks include Ciancio Park, named after the Italian-American Denver resident Joe Ciancio, Jr., which is located on the same lot with Horace Mann Junior High School. Joe Ciancio co-founded multiple Italian-American fraternal organizations, served as a city councilman, and was manager of the Denver Parks and Recreation Department from 1965 to 1983.²⁶ Chaffee Park, a small park at the corner of W. 43rd Avenue and Tejon Street, was part of the original plat for the Chaffee Park Subdivision in 1945.²⁷

Three public schools are located in Sunnyside. The oldest, Smedley Elementary, was built in the neighborhood in 1902 and designed by Denver architect David Dryden. It was named after Dr. William Smedley, an early resident of Denver and member of the board of education. Additions were made to the main building in 1911, 1952, and 1955. saved it from demolition and it was designated as a Denver Landmark in 1992.²⁸ Horace Mann Junior High School was constructed in 1931 and designed by the Denver architect Temple Hoyne Buell in a striking combination of Art Deco and Collegiate Gothic styles. It is named after Horace Mann, who led the Common School movement in the nineteenth century to provide free public education for all children. An addition was built in 1956 and it was designated as a Denver Landmark in 1995.²⁹ In 1955 Remington Elementary School was constructed at the southwest corner of W. 48th Avenue and Pecos Street to serve the postwar housing developments in the northern part of Sunnyside and the Chaffee Park neighborhood north of W. 48th Avenue. Named after the western painter Walter Wood Remington, the school was built in the International style common to many of Denver's public schools at the time.

Commercial Areas

The commercial areas in Sunnyside developed along the streetcar lines on W. 44th Avenue, Tejon Street, and W. 38th Avenue, as well as part of Federal Boulevard.

The most prominent commercial corridor is W. 44th Avenue. Located in the center of the neighborhood, W. 44th Avenue provided a central location easily accessible to most of the neighborhood. Distinct commercial nodes, mostly featuring one-part commercial structures dating from the early twentieth century into the mid-century era, are located at the intersections with Eliot Street, Clay Street, Zuni Street, and Tejon Street. An early-twentieth-century commercial node at the intersection of Tejon Street and W. 41st Avenue includes a collection of one-part and two-part brick commercial structures. This intersection was a major streetcar stop, and continues to be a central feature of the Sunnyside neighborhood.

W. 38th Avenue appears to have been primarily residential on the north side of the street in Sunnyside, with a few commercial nodes along the corridor. Unfortunately, most of these commercial structures have been replaced with modern construction. However, there are extant commercial nodes at Clay Street, Pecos Street, and Mariposa Street. Other noteworthy commercial structures on W. 38th Avenue include a cottage-style gas station at Tejon Street and a single-block commercial structure at Jason Street. Similarly, Federal Boulevard is primarily residential through Sunnyside with discrete blocks of commercial development. The most striking of these is the Federal Theatre at W. 38th Avenue. Built in 1923, the structure included a movie

Industrial Areas

A small L-shaped industrial district is located in the northeastern corner of Sunnyside, between N. Pecos Street and Inca Street, from W. 48th Avenue and W. 46th Avenue, that extends south to W. 44th Avenue between Lipan Street and Inca Street, and then further south to W. 41st Avenue between Kalamath Street and Inca Street. This area was developed in the 1950s and continuing through the 1990s.³¹ One-story warehouses and light industrial structures reflect the shift from reliance on railroads to trucking in the mid- twentieth century and correspond with the construction of I-70 through the north side of Denver along W. 48th Avenue. These businesses likely provided employment opportunities for the Latino community that moved into Sunnyside after World War II.

1970 to the Present

From the 1970s on Sunnyside remained a primarily residential neighborhood populated by working-class families of largely Latino descent. Following the trend of other neighborhoods in northwest Denver, Sunnyside has recently become attractive to young college-educated professionals looking for affordable housing within the Denver metro area. The industrial corridor to the east continues to operate and the commercial areas are all still active. In the 1980s local residents concerned about neglect of the neighborhood organized to shape the redevelopment of the neighborhood, which culminated in the 1992 Sunnyside Neighborhood Plan and the formation of Sunnyside United Neighborhoods (SUNI).³² SUNI has remained an active community organization focusing on neighborhood improvement since the 1990s. While recent single- and multi-family development has replaced much of the neighborhood's oldest structures, an example of a surviving nineteenth-century residential block can be found on Kalamath Street between W. 39th Avenue and W. 40th Avenue. Much of the neighborhood west of Zuni Street retains its historic character as a twentieth-century streetcar suburb, and the 1940s postwar housing developments retain strong integrity.

6. RESULTS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Summary

A total of 3,347 parcels were surveyed in the Sunnyside survey area. Vacant parcels and buildings less than thirty years of age were surveyed at the Foundation level, while more information was gathered on those buildings that were over thirty years of age. Forty-nine individual buildings were surveyed at the Enhanced level and were evaluated for historical, architectural, or cultural significance. Eight areas were identified as having a concentration of buildings with architectural, cultural, or historical significance.

Survey Levels

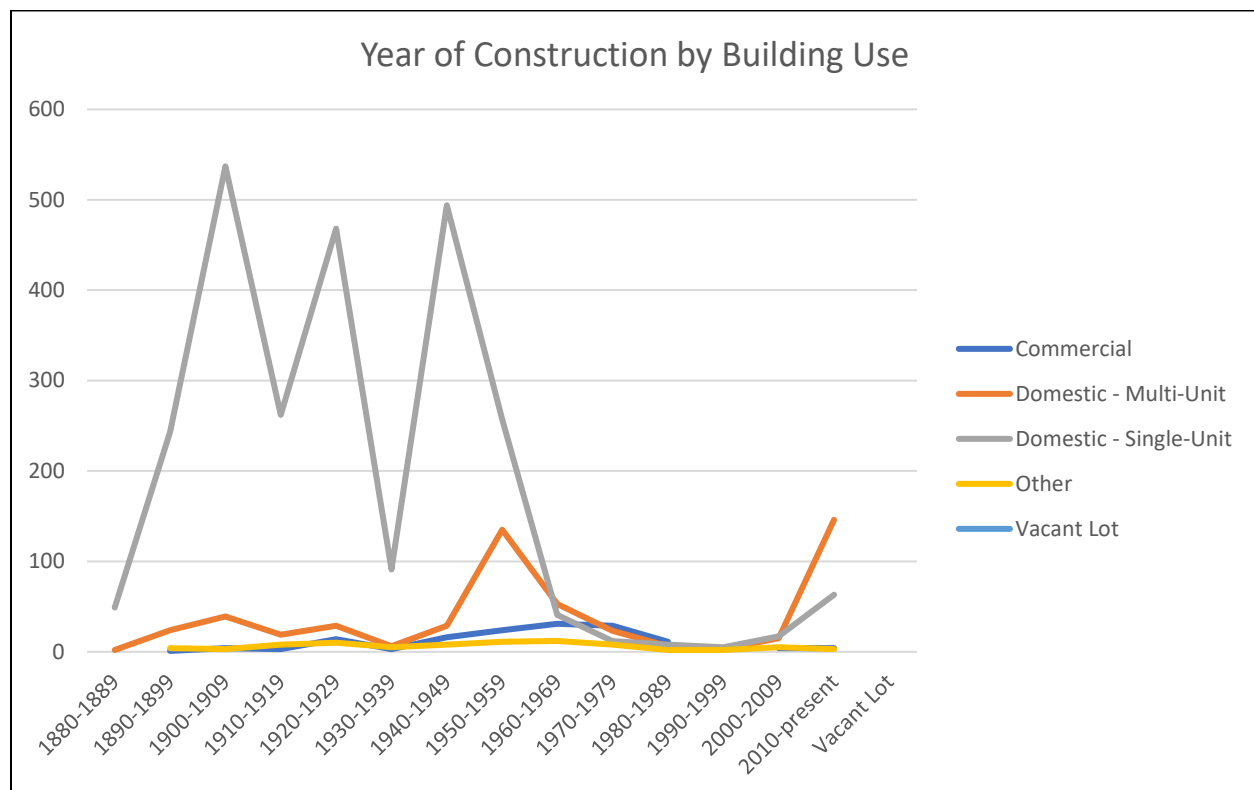

Parcels surveyed at the Foundation level are those containing buildings less than thirty years of age or no buildings at all. Buildings surveyed at the Descriptive survey level were over thirty years of age but had major alterations. Those surveyed at the Evaluation level were over thirty years of age and were unaltered or had alterations that were considered minor or moderate. The majority of properties surveyed in the Sunnyside survey area were documented at the Evaluation level. Historical research was performed for buildings surveyed at the Enhanced level, and these properties were evaluated for architectural, historical, and cultural significance.

Survey Level	Description	Count
Foundation	Vacant parcels or less than 30 years old	313
Descriptive	Over 30 years old with major alterations	249
Evaluation	Over 30 years old with good integrity	2,736
Enhanced	Evaluated for significance	49

Years of Construction

Most buildings in Sunnyside, across all use categories, were constructed prior to 1960. The majority of single-unit homes, making up over 75% of Sunnyside's building stock, were constructed between 1910 and 1969 though few homes were constructed during the Great Depression. Construction of multi-unit residential buildings peaked just after World War II, as builders raced to fill the housing shortage that met returning soldiers. A spike in the construction of multi-unit homes in Sunnyside has occurred since 2010, during Denver's current building boom. 144 commercial buildings were documented in Sunnyside, most constructed between 1920 and 1980.

Building Forms and Styles

For purposes of this report and the Discover Denver project more generally, a distinction is made between building forms and architectural styles. Building forms are generally identified by the organization of a building's plan and massing. For example, the Foursquare building form is so-called because it is organized, in plan, into four zones of similar size in a square configuration. On the other hand, architectural styles are identified by design features applied to the building. Like clothing, architectural styles come and go according to what is in vogue at any period in time. The Queen Anne architectural style, characterized by over-the-top detailing such as textured shingles, patterned masonry and spindle-work, was "in style" between the late-1880s and late-1890s. After the turn of the century, few Queen Anne homes were constructed as homeowners opted for styles, such as Edwardian, with more classical elements.

It should be noted that the concepts of style and form are sometimes used interchangeably. For instance, in their A Field Guide to American Houses, Virginia and Lee McAlester note that the term "bungalow" was used in the early 1900s to describe small homes constructed in the Craftsman style and that it was only after 1920 that the bungalow was understood as a type to which other styles could be applied.³³

Likewise, some buildings may have a building form but no clear architectural style. Such buildings are documented by Discover Denver with the appropriate form and an architectural style of "No Clear Architectural Style."

Architectural Styles

In the Sunnyside survey area, the Discover Denver team observed twenty-three architectural styles, as well as numerous examples of buildings that, while carrying no specific style, exhibited identifiable stylistic elements. The following tables present the most commonly observed architectural styles in the survey area.

Building Forms/Types

The Discover Denver project documented thirty-one different building forms in the Sunnyside survey area, with an additional 103 buildings documented as “Other” in the building form field because they did not fit any of the identified building forms in the database. Many of the buildings documented as having an “Other” form had poor historic physical integrity.

The following building forms and/or types are presented within Single-unit, Multi-unit, and Commercial categories and are present in sufficient quantities to be considered character-defining for the Sunnyside area.

Single-Unit Residential Building Forms/Types

The majority (73%) of buildings in the Sunnyside survey area were documented as single-unit homes. Over half (52%) of these were of the Bungalow or Minimal Traditional forms. Other single-unit buildings were distributed across other identifiable types/forms.

Multi-Unit Residential Building Forms/Types

Multi-unit buildings in the survey area varied widely across time, with the earliest examples dating from the late 1890s and the majority built in the last ten years. Terrace Type buildings were the dominant multi-unit form built in Sunnyside prior to 1920. While construction of duplexes became prevalent in the 1920s and remained strong through the 1970s, the Apartment Block form became common after the end of World War II. While not common in Sunnyside, some Garden Court apartments were constructed in the survey area in the 1940s through the 1960s. A building form was not documented for buildings less than 30 years of age.

Commercial Building Forms/Types

Most commercial buildings in the Sunnyside survey area are associated with Denver’s former streetcar system, or with the industrial area found along the neighborhood’s eastern edge. Streetcar commercial buildings consist mainly of One- and Two-Part Commercial Block buildings located along W. 38th and W. 44th avenues, and Tejon and Lipan streets. While many of these buildings have seen significant alteration, small commercial districts are still found at the intersection of Tejon Street and W. 41st Avenue, and along W. 44th Avenue.

Buildings associated with more industrial uses are located between Lipan Street and the railroad tracks, which mark the eastern boundary of Sunnyside, and north of W. 45th Avenue. Most of these buildings are of the Commercial/Industrial Block form.

Properties Evaluated for Significance

Of the properties documented during field survey (no designated properties were recorded), 4.9% (N=161) were documented as having no alterations visible from the public right of way. Additionally, 86.5% (N=2624) were documented as having minor or moderate alterations (e.g., window replacement or subordinate rear additions) indicating that, while they may be too altered to be individually architecturally significant, they carry sufficient historic integrity to easily convey their history to passers-by and still have the ability to contribute to the historic landscape of the survey area.

Of the total buildings recorded in the survey area, 49 buildings or 3% were selected for Enhanced survey. In most cases buildings were selected because field observations supported the possibility that they might be architecturally significant. In a few cases, property owners or community members informed surveyors in the field that the building had aspects to its history that might indicate historical or cultural significance. The following table lists the buildings evaluated at the Enhanced level, along with their determinations of eligibility at the local, national, and state levels.

This list should not by any means be considered a complete list of potentially significant properties in the survey area; more data than was available from right-of-way survey would be required to make that determination. Any building in the neighborhood for which sufficient historic physical integrity and historic, cultural, or geographical importance can be shown should be considered to be potentially significant.

Areas of Significance

For the purposes of the Discover Denver project, an “Area of Significance” is identified as an area where most buildings retain their historic physical integrity and the ability to convey a shared history. While new construction has altered the historic character of much of the Sunnyside neighborhood, relatively intact pockets of buildings remain.

Discover Denver identified eight “Areas of Significance” in the survey area, each possessing fair to excellent physical integrity and the ability to convey the story of development and growth in northwest Denver.

Area of Significance #1: Chaffee Park Subdivision

Area of Significance #1 encompasses the Chaffee Park Subdivision, platted in 1945 by the Chaffee Park Building Corporation, headed by John N. Lantz. The subdivision's curvilinear streets set it apart from the surrounding area which follows a traditional grid system. Streets are lined with modest Minimal Traditional homes, constructed just after World War II to help with the post-war housing shortage. In addition to platting the subdivision, the Chaffee Park Building Corporation built and sold the homes. Building permits show the houses were constructed in three different models (models A, B, and C), and many were built without basements. While many of these houses have had windows and siding replaced, the Minimal Traditional form of the homes is still clear to passersby and the feel of a late-1940s subdivision remains.

Area of Significance #2: Clough Subdivision

Area of Significance #2 is a collection of Minimal Traditional houses in the 4400 block of Elm Court and Eliot Street, all located in the Clough Addition. The lots were owned by the North Denver Development Company, headed by John N. Lantz who also platted and developed the Chaffee Park Subdivision (Area #1). Building permits show that Lantz hired building contractor Walter H. Harris to construct most of the homes. While multiple current residents shared with Discover Denver volunteers that the builder of the homes on these two blocks sold only to married veterans with children, research could not confirm this story. This small section of Sunnyside retains good integrity of form and scale, with most changes consisting of window and siding replacement. These two blocks easily convey Post-World War II suburban construction in Denver.

Area of Significance #3: Stylish Sunnyside

Area of Significance #3 contains an intact collection of a wide variety of late-19th and both early and mid-20th century architectural styles and forms. All along the streets and avenues one can find both simple and elaborate homes in a variety of forms and styles, including English Norman Cottage, Craftsman Bungalow, Classic Cottage, Edwardian, Mission Revival, and Dutch Colonial Revival, along with mid-century apartments and Minimal Traditional and Ranch infill from the Post-World War II period. The area shows how Sunnyside evolved from a mostly-rural community to what it is today.

Area of Significance #4: Terre Bonne Place

Area of Significance #4 consists of the northern portion of the east side of the 4700 block of Federal Boulevard. The collection of English Norman Cottage homes is quite intact and indicative of the once-residential nature of this now busy corridor. The homes are located on the western edge of the Terre Bonne Subdivision, platted by the Federal Boulevard Development Company in 1925. 4736 through 4792 Federal Boulevard were built by the Federal Boulevard Development Company in 1925 and advertised as “Terre Bonne Place.”

Area #7 consists of both sides of the 4500 blocks of Wyandot and Vallejo streets as well as the 4500 block of N. Zuni Street between W. Scott Place and W. 46th Avenue. It is a good collection of early-to-mid-20th century small houses such as Craftsman Bungalows, English Norman Cottages, and Minimal Traditionals. A few Ranches are scattered along the streets as well.

The houses along these two streets exemplify an eclectic mix of architectural styles and forms: Edwardian, Terrace, Craftsman Bungalow, Classic Cottage, Minimal Traditional, and Ranch. A gem of this area is the ornamental Transfiguration of our Lord Ukrainian Catholic Church at W. 41st Avenue and Shoshone Street.

Conclusion

The Sunnyside neighborhood is made up of a rich mix of buildings representing different eras and uses. The earliest homes in the neighborhood date to the 1880s when the area was primarily agricultural. As streetcar lines began to serve the area and it became more accessible, new homes were constructed and small commercial districts developed throughout Sunnyside. The eastern edge of the neighborhood bordering the railroad tracks developed as a primarily industrial area, a use it continues today.

After World War II, new plats subdivided much of the formerly agricultural land. Small additions were developed with modest homes, and the large public housing project known as the Quigg Newton Homes was built, taking up much of the northeast corner of Sunnyside. Apartment buildings were constructed during this time, tucked in with existing single-unit homes.

While Sunnyside remained largely unchanged for many years, significant high-density development has occurred throughout the neighborhood over the past decade. Despite this redevelopment, pockets of buildings still exist throughout the neighborhood that have seen little change and that have the ability to convey the neighborhood's story. Additionally, individual buildings remain that have significance in their own right. The hope is that through the work of Discover Denver, residents and visitors to Sunnyside will be able to identify and value the resources that remain, and that they may be preserved for years to come.

8. SURVEY LOG

Evaluations made as a part of this survey project are intended to assist city staff, property owners, and other interested parties with understanding a property's potential significance. These evaluations may be revised in the future should additional information be discovered, or if the property no longer retains its historic physical integrity.

A determination of significance or eligibility does not formally designate a resource as a historic landmark or put any restrictions on it. Designation would require a significant level of community support and the successful completion of a rigorous public process.
